

Dogs at Camp!

Glen Kowarsky, with his dog Abby.

He's the owner of Dogs at Camp, a successful doggy overnight camp in the country for pampered pooches. While their owners are away, man's best friend gets hikes through the woods and romps in a pond – what dog wouldn't love it?

Glen came up with the idea after he was unable to find high quality care for his own dog while he was on vacation. He had moved to the country and was looking for a way to combine his new rural lifestyle with a business opportunity and realized that turning his acreage into a puppy paradise was his ticket to the big time.

He opened the camp six years ago and it's been a runaway success. He's got five full-time staff members and celebs and pro athletes leave their pups with Glen. He's so busy, he's having to turn away clients!

And now Glen's betting he can fetch some franchisees with the lure of country living and a proven business concept.
